5 FUN FACTS

While Port Douglas Daintree might be all pretty up top, we're also a treasure chest of fun facts! How many of these did you know?

1. WHY ARE PALM TREES BENDY?

All around the beaches, you'll notice crazy angles with some of the palm trees, as if they were reaching towards the water. Why? Hold on to your tropical skirts, kids – palm trees aren't actually trees. WHAT? Palm trees are members of the grass family so are basically huge, woody blades of grass, bending in the wind and leaning towards the sun hoping to get their green tops warmed! Have you seen a bendy palm tree you love?

2. PLAY UNDERWATER BINGO

The Great Barrier Reef is home to The Great Eight – eight of the most photogenic and camera-lovin' critters in the sea! Clownfish, Maori Wrasse, Giant Clam, Green Sea Turtle, Manta Ray, Potato Cod, Shark and Whale – get out your waterproof cameras and let's play Underwater Bingo! How many can you snap?

3. FOUR MILE IS NOT ACTUALLY FOUR MILES

Long considered the star child of Port Douglas, this landmark is plastered over postcards and 'so you want a tropical getaway' ads. But, despite its name, the beach isn't actually four miles long – it's four kilometres. How did it get its name then? It's named after a prominent Indigenous local family named Fourmile. Snap the full length of this sandy coast in one frame?

4. DINOSAURS ROAMING

Want to see real life dinosaurs? Don't let those pesky historians tell you otherwise – here in Port Douglas Daintree, dinosaurs really do exist. The majestic cassowary is a direct relative to those killer Gondwana birds, the velociraptors, and our favourite apex predator, the saltwater crocodile was once known as... well, a saltwater crocodile. Nothing much changes. Snap, but beware!

5. SUNRISES AND SUNSETS

Port Douglas is a stunning coastline point surrounded by ocean on three sides, giving it the most spectacular vista where sunrise can be watched on one side of town and sunset on the other. So, no matter if you're a daytime or night-time person, you'll get to see the sun spread her fairy floss-coloured rays all over the skies. Show us your pics!
